LAST FAREWELL

Former students, the sentimental and those drawn to finalities gathered at the Plank Road School Sunday for a last farewell to the one-room school house in Pennsylvania. The school, in operation for 94 years, will close at the end of the school year on June 11. Guy McCloskey, 544 E. Main St., Youngsville, who attended the school in 1901, and his wife (center), were among the open house visitors. At right is Mrs. Margaret Marshall who has taught at Plank Road for the past 18 years. (Photo by Dorriion)

Campus Violence May Lead to Urban Flare-Up

ST. PAUL, Minn. AP — Hubert H. Humphrey says the Nixon administration is misjudging the urgency of domestic needs and he sees a threat that the pattern of campus violence may flash back into urban slums "with grave dangers."

The defeated Democratic presidential candidate declared in an interview that disturbances by campus radicals are provoking a dangerous backlash threatening the educational system.

"It's going to promote a new kind of McCarthyism if we don't watch out," he said.

Now a part-time professor himself, Humphrey urged university officials to try to deal with the disturbances themselves through their powers of suspension and expulsion before turning to the police.

Humphrey, whose 1968 presidential campaign was hurt by Chicago convention demonstrations and police actions, said it is very important that campus authorities be "very careful about the use of police." Students, he said, are generally anti-police.

But he cautioned against permitting a campus to become "a haven for criminal acts" and criticized granting amnesty to demonstrators "violating every standard of the university."

President Nixon, Humphrey said, is not giving enough urgency to domestic problems and "is going to be in trouble unless he reverses his field."

"The most dangerous missiles for this country are not the Russian missiles," said Humphrey. "They are the missiles of alienation in these cities." He added:

"I think President Nixon and his administration have misjudged the urgency of the domestic crisis—I mean the danger of it"

"What you see on the campus is only a transfer of the pattern of violence from what was the ghetto violence a little while ago to the campus. Now that can be transferred back into the ghetto immediately and with grave dangers."

"And I think Mr. Nixon's budget is inadequate . . . I think the sense of urgency is not there. I think he knows what the facts are, but I don't believe there is the feeling you have to move as rapidly as I believe we have to."

Humphrey, who has been lecturing at Macalester College and the University of Minnesota, said, "You can't afford to let you cannot in the name of peace on the campus permit a handful of young men and women who are determined to have their will and their way destroy property, disrupt classrooms, intimidate the professors or intimidate the student body."

Laird Rejects Kennedy's Criticism of War Tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird rejected Sunday Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's criticism of U.S. war tactics in Vietnam, defending the present policy of keeping "maximum military pressure on the enemy consistent with the lowest possible casualties."

Laird's remarks, in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press, amounted to a rejection also of demands by the Massachusetts senator and other Democrats for a change in those tactics, which Kennedy in a Senate speech last week called "senseless and irresponsible."

Asked what he thinks of Kennedy's objections to U.S. battle tactics, Laird replied: "The military commanders are carrying out to the best of their ability the orders that were prescribed by President Nixon and President Johnson for the military conduct of the war on the ground in Vietnam."

"It's always been our goal to keep the maximum pressure on the enemy consistent with the lowest possible casualties," Laird, interviewed just before he boarded his plane for week-long NATO meetings in Europe, said "these continue to be the instructions" to U.S. field commanders.

Paralleling a White House statement Friday, Laird said "we shouldn't try to second-guess our commanders after an action has taken place."

However, Laird avoided any stand on whether he endorses specifically the conduct of the battle of Ap Bia Mountain in which about 50 Americans were killed and more than 200 wounded during a 10-day fight to take the position from North Vietnamese troops.

"I don't want to get into that particular operation," Laird said.

It was the battle for Ap Bia—more commonly known as Hamburger Hill—that sparked the latest surge of Democratic criticism of U.S. war policy, spearheaded by Kennedy's attack on the Senate floor. The criticism was renewed by Kennedy in a Saturday night speech and he was joined by Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., in a bring-the-boys-home theme.

Apollo Astronauts Ready for Fiery Return to Earth

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Refreshed by the first space shave and yearning for home, Apollo 10 astronauts joked through an unscheduled telecast Sunday and said they were ready for their fiery return to earth Monday.

Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford and Navy Cmdrs. John

W. Young and Eugene A. Cernan—streaking back from a near-pass over the moon that put America on the threshold of a lunar landing—flashed past the halfway point of their homeward trip.

Stafford said he made the telecast to show the crew's clean shaven chins. They had shorn their six-day beards, using ordinary razors and brushless cream.

"This is a remarkable innovation," said Young. "After spending a lot of money on mechanical shavers which always managed to leave whiskers flying around the atmosphere, somebody finally came up with the idea of using a razor and brushless shaving cream."

Young said the crew just spread on cream and shaved, wiping the razor with a towel. The cream held the whiskers, he said, and kept them from floating free in the weightless space.

"That's amazing," said capsule communicator Charles Duke genially. "That's what the space age does for you."

"I'll tell you, Charlie," replied Cernan, "that's one of the most refreshing things that happened in the last couple of days. That was really great."

Stafford earlier said the crew had completed most of the routine chores they had to do before streaking back into the earth's atmosphere Monday to land in the South Pacific.

They awoke early and eager Sunday but were apparently tiring of their adventure and anxious for home.

The astronauts passed the halfway point in their earthward voyage at 4:39 p.m., EDT.

Thieu Assumes Leadership Of New Political Alliance

(c) N.Y. Times News Service SAIGON — President Nguyen Van Thieu Sunday assumed personal leadership of a newly-formed pro-government political alliance, the National Social Democratic Front.

Addressing some 2,000 delegates at the Front's inaugural meeting in a theater in Saigon, Thieu described it as "the first concrete step in unifying the political factions in South Vietnam for the coming political struggle with the Communists."

Thieu first announced seven weeks ago that he would form an alliance of non-Communist parties to compete in future elections against the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front.

In the opinion of independent western diplomats and observers here, the organization Thieu unveiled Sunday represents considerably less than the broad-based all embracing popular front that the president originally set out to form.

It is essentially a grouping of largely conservative, northern Catholic and Centrist organizations that would probably support the president, individually anyway.

Missing from the organization are several significant southern political groups, including the newly-formed Progressive Nationalist Party, and the militant An Quang faction of the Buddhists. Also absent are several prominent southern political figures, such as former Gen. Tran Van Don, who is now a member of the South Vietnamese senate, and Duong Van Minh, the popular general who led the overthrow of the late president Ngo Dinh Diem, and recently returned from exile in Bangkok.

Commenting on the membership of the new alliance Don said: "The president has been able to rally his friends, but not all of them."

Another somewhat more positive observation was offered by an American diplomat who said: "It's a great achievement, in a way. Two years ago it would have been impossible to get all those people under the same roof."

Thieu began encountering problems in forming the alliance shortly after he announced his plan to do so in an address to the joint opening session of the National Assembly on April 7.

He found many of the party leaders unwilling to commit themselves, while others laid down elaborate conditions before they pledged their support. Still others were anxious to join, but reluctant to share the power and influence that would come with membership in the alliance with other smaller parties.

The details of the alliance were worked out in intensive bargaining sessions at the presidential palace that dragged on over several weeks.

ERIC W. COOK

A dinner for the visiting dignitaries will be held in the evening at the Three Flags Inn with an informal program similar to last year's enjoyable affair.

The Three Flags will fly night and day from May 30 until Nov. 11, Veterans Day, when they will be lowered with appropriate formalities.

British Consul to Speak At Flag Raising Ceremony

Plans have been completed for the raising of the Three Flags in Crescent Park on Memorial Day, May 30, and the principal address will be given by Eric W. Cook, Her Britannic Majesty's Consul in Cleveland.

Mr. Cook will be remembered for his part in last year's ceremony when he made brief remarks and presented the English Flag at that Memorial Day program.

T. K. Stratton, chairman of this year's event, announces that the program next Friday will open at 3:30 p.m. with a concert by the Beaty Junior High School Band directed by Richard West.

The flag raising will begin at 4 p.m. with Chase Putnam, president of the Warren County Historical Society presiding. A color guard from the United States Marine Corps will be present to accept the Betsy Ross, the Fleur-de-Lis, and the King's Colors and raise them to the top of the poles.

The Rev. John T. Carter will give the invocation and the Rev. R. C. Dowling will pronounce the benediction.

The public is cordially invited to attend the ceremonies which will last about one hour.

RN Associates Honor GOP $1,000 Contributors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans, reminding potential contributors who's in the White House now, are awarding their $1,000 donors membership in a group called RN Associates.

RN, of course, stands for Richard Nixon. The group's operation and pricetag are similar to those of the President's Club of Democratic administrations—which drew periodic bursts of Republican criticism while Lyndon B. Johnson was president.

But Republicans say their new group isn't like the LBJ club.

RN Associates is the successor to a group called Republican Associates, the organization of $1,000 donors which operated during the years of Democratic power.

"It's basically the same appeal, to be sort of an associate member of the national committee," said Thomas Bauer, executive director of the GOP finance committee.

The original RN Associates were major contributors to Nixon's bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

Republican officials decline to disclose the number of RN Associates now on the books. There is some confusion about who is and who isn't an RN Associate. This stems from a May 2 fund-raising dinner which cost some 2,700 diners $1,000 a plate. The party hasn't decided yet whether a ticket to that affair made a donor a member.

One GOP fund-raiser ruefully acknowledged the difficulty of telling a ticket-buyer now that his $1,000 outlay didn't make him a member of the club.

RN Associates is one of two groups set up by GOP finance men for major donors. The other is called the Booster's Club, and Nixon once was its honorary chairman.

Chief Justice Writes Rules For Off-the-Bench Activities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice Earl Warren, nearing the end of a career measured in historical decisions and controversy, has called a special meeting of the Judicial Conference for one last chore—writing rules for off-the-bench activities of federal judges.

Warren called the conference into session for June 10 to consider recommendations being shaped by its 11-member Committee on Court Administration.

Judge Robert A. Ainsworth Jr. of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, the committee chairman, said in a statement Saturday the administration committee "met and considered several matters relating to nonjudicial activities of the United States judges and possible financial disclosure rules for the federal judiciary."

The meeting lasted five hours and was held under tight security. It recommended calling the full 25-member Judicial Conference into early session.

The conference normally would not meet until its regular fall session so the special meeting appears to be an attempt to head off, or at least influence the nature of, disclosure laws which Congress may pass.

Demands for such laws have been heard in Congress in aftermath to the resignation of Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas and renewed publicity about Justice William O. Douglas recently severed connection with the Parvlin Foundation.

Ainsworth said the committee will meet again June 9—the last day the Supreme Court is scheduled to hand down decisions this term—to put together its recommendations for the conference meeting the next day.

As chief justice, Warren is ex-officio chairman of the conference and dealing with a code of conduct for federal judges could be his last task before retiring at the end of the term after 16 eventful years as the nation's chief judge.

How the judges themselves might receive a set of rules of conduct is open to question because they are appointed for life and tend to be highly independent.

The life term was intended to insulate them from meddling by the other branches of government. They can be removed only by congressional impeachment and this has happened only four times.

Over the past 27 years, the conference has laid down a series of rules for judges but has not adopted a comprehensive code covering financial conduct in nonjudicial activities.

President Nixon has nominated Judge Warren E. Burger of the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals to succeed Warren.

Burger has acknowledged accepting $7,500 from the Mayo Foundation of Rochester, Minn., over his 13 years as an appeals judge, but maintains there was no impropriety.

The relation between justices and foundations is at the root of the furor over disclosure. In 1966 Fortas accepted a $20,000 fee from the Wolfson Family Foundation for writing and research, then returned it 11 months later after Louis E. Wolfson was indicted for stock manipulation.

An American Bar Association committee said last week Fortas' relations with Wolfson were clearly contrary to its canons of ethics.

Douglas's position as president of the Parvlin Foundation—which he resigned last week—also is expected to be checked by an ABA committee.

CHURCH ON HORSEBACK

Over 50 young people attended church on horseback at the Columbus "No-Bar" Riding Club Sunday morning. The members of Warren County Horse Clubs, joined by families and friends in the grandstands, heard Evangelist Dale E. Linebaugh of Miracle Mt. Ranch, Spring Creek, deliver a message and then make an appeal to the entire community to support the proposed $4,000 4-H building at Youngsville-Warren County fairground. He said that as long as Warren County has an active 4-H program, its young people will use their energies creatively rather than destructively and challenged business people throughout Warren County to donate building materials and equipment to make the 4-H center possible. The unique church service on horseback was held in recognition of 4-H

Rural Sunday. The call to worship was by Isaac Borland of the Yankee Bush Trailblazers. The invocation was given by Brenda Phillips of the Russell 4-H Horse and Pony Club. A trio of girls from the Sugar Grove Ruff Riders—Gayle Shepherd, Lynn Shepherd and Patrick Sweeney—sang "How Great Thou Art," to organ accompaniment by Denise Harvey of the Columbus Wranglers. The benediction was given by Matthew Putman, Brokenstraw Trailblazers. Corry State Police and Civil Defense members provided safe escort for the horses and riders on heavily traveled Rte. 6; the organ was provided by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Graves and the "No-Bar" club grounds were donated for the services. U.S. Shifts Emphasis

In Viet Battle Losses

SAIGON (AP) — In an apparent move to shift emphasis from American battle losses, the U.S. Command said Sunday that more than 40 of the enemy were killed for every allied soldier in scattered action over the past 24 hours.

The announcement was made after a week of congressional debate over increasing U.S. casualties in Vietnam.

The headquarters announcement said 407 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers were killed in battles that ranged from 60 miles northwest of Saigon to the Mekong Delta 105 miles southwest of the capital.

U.S. losses were put at four killed and 83 wounded, while South Vietnamese casualties were listed as six killed and 16 wounded.

Much of the fighting was sparked by allied forces sweeping through known enemy staging areas or by reports from air and ground observers who spotted enemy troops on the move.

North Vietnam projected a different casualty picture, claiming that the U.S. American Division, rated as a crack American outfit, had become one of the hardest hit American units.

New Location

For Council

Meeting

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Jamestown City Council will meet in new quarters tonight to consider some two dozen resolutions. Topping the list is a resolution calling for the approval of an $89,589 contract for the widening and paving of Falconer st. from Buffalo st. to Curtis st.

The meeting will be held in the court chambers of the Federal Building. The old council chambers have been demolished as part of the new city hall construction project.

DPW director Joseph E. Veale said only $30,000 was placed in this year's budget for the Falconer st. project, but added that funds are being transferred from other parts of the department's budget to make up the difference. The contractor for the work will be Twin Village Construction Co. of Depew, N.Y.

Another resolution authorizes leasing the new 350-car parking ramp at Fourth and Cherry sts. to Jamestown Civic Auto Ramp Inc. The corporation, a group of local businessmen, will contract with National Garages of Detroit for the operation of the new parking facility which is set to open this Thursday.

The ramp was originally scheduled to open at Christmas time, but several delays postponed the opening date by four months.

Apollo

They were then 121,221 miles from both earth and moon, traveling at more than 4,100 miles an hour and gaining speed due to earth's gravity pull.

The crew greeted Mission Control with a recorded version of "Going Back to Houston" and told the ground controllers the song was to "remind you of our determination."

The Apollo 10 mission has completed successfully its major goal to prove that the hardware and techniques America's space program has developed can land men on the moon. The prime goal of Apollo 10 was to clear the way for a manned landing on the moon by Apollo 11, now set for July. Officials said in Houston that Apollo 10 has apparently removed the last barrier to the lunar landing.

Stafford, remembering it was Sunday, turned his thoughts to God and asked that some of his favorite scriptures be read from the pulpit of his church, Seabrook Methodist, near Houston. "How about doing me a favor," Stafford called down to capsule communicator Joe Engle.

"You name it," said Engle. "We're kinda out of town for church today," he said and then asked that Engle ask the minister at his church to read some special scriptures.

Stafford selected Psalm 8, Psalm 122, Psalm 138 and Isaiah 2:4.

Psalm 8 includes these passages: "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained;

"What is man, that Thou art mindful of him? And the son of man that Thou visitest him?"

"For Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels and has crowned him with glory and honor."

"Just tell the congregation hello for me," said Stafford. "I thought that those might be appropriate."

The astronauts kidded the ground controllers by "waking" them up Sunday morning with music from space, the reverse of the usual procedure.

"This is Tom, John and Gene broadcasting again from approximately 140,000 miles out into the universe," said Cernan just after the crew awoke earlier than scheduled. "It's a beautiful day out here and it appears it might be a beautiful day down in mother earth country."

Then, imitating the bright pattern of a disc jockey, Cernan added: "Get up lazy bones. It's time you got up. Big day ahead."

He played down to Mission Control a Frank Sinatra recording of "Come Fly With Me."

"Good morning, Apollo 10," said a ground controller, playing along with Cernan's joke. "You managed to wake everybody up early down here and thank you for your brief program."

Several astronauts were injured in weekend accidents.

John A. Hutchin, 20, Star Rt., Franklin, was admitted to Warren General Hospital for observation Sunday after his car hit an embankment along Rt. 62 in Limestone twp. and rolled over, state police said. He was later released.

Borough police said the youngster ran from the north curb of Pennsylvania ave. into the path of a west bound car operated by Robert James Lucas, 19, 617 West st. She was treated at Warren General Hospital and released.

Several others were injured in weekend accidents.

John A. Hutchin, 20, Star Rt., Franklin, was admitted to Warren General Hospital for observation Sunday after his car hit an embankment along Rt. 62 in Limestone twp. and rolled over, state police said. He was later released.

Borough police reported three persons were injured when a car hit a utility pole Saturday along Pennsylvania ave. near Laurel st. Treated at Warren General Hospital were the driver, Dorothy Hanlin, 40, Mabel G. Hanlin, 59, and Susan Hanlin, 9, all of 202 Sprague st., Jamestown, N.Y. Police said the wheels locked on the eastbound car causing it to swerve into the pole.

State police reported a car-truck collision on Rt. 62 north of Warren on Saturday. Charles A. Huilinen, 28, R.D. 3, Clearfield, driving south in a truck drifted to the left and struck an auto operated by Dennis M. Tome, 17, 28 Maple st., who was in the center lane preparing to turn left, they said. Tome was treated for a leg injury at the hospital.

Cars operated by John Andrew Peterson, 19, Box 524, Sugar Grove, and Emory K. Miller, 23, RD 3, Sugar Grove, side-swiped on Round Hill rd. north of Chandeliers Valley Sunday night causing $700 damage, state police reported.

SPANGLER, Pa. (AP) — Eugene Sherry, 54, of Elmore in Northern Cambria County, was killed Sunday when his car ran off U.S. 219 and into the Dunn Lumber Co.

Sherry was taken to the Menners Hospital in Spangler where he died.

The light mood disappeared briefly when Mission Control later told the crew a mid-course correction was needed to adjust the Apollo 10 flight path.

Stafford at first misunderstood and bubbled with elation at being precisely on course for the Monday landing in the South Pacific.

"From what I take from that," he said, "is we don't make any more mid-course corrections."

"Fantastic," chimed in Young, the spacecraft navigator.

"The numbers I gave you were with a mid-course," said Mission Control. "So we are going to do a mid-course."

"Oh, rog," said Stafford, disappointment hanging heavy in his voice. "I understand. Thank you."

"We're right in there pretty close," consoled a ground controller. "But we ought to sweeten it up a little."

Apollo 10 must precisely hit the re-entry corridor to land safely in the Pacific 395 miles east of Pago Pago.

If the spacecraft comes in correctly at 12:52 p.m. EDT Monday it will collide with the earth atmosphere at 26,694 miles per hour.

Friction of air streaming past the fleeting craft will cause the spacecraft heat shield to glow and then burn away, layer after layer. The crew inside, however, is kept at a comfortable temperature.

Re-entry is one of the most dangerous parts of a flight to lunar distances.

The spacecraft re-enters at much higher speeds than in flights in earth orbit.

If the re-entry angle is too steep, the intense pressure of the atmosphere could cause Apollo 10 to break up.

If the re-entry angle is too shallow, the high speed could cause the spacecraft to skip, glancing off the top of the atmosphere like a flat stone skipping across a pond. The skip could carry the spacecraft far back out into space and into an orbit that would bring the astronauts back to earth long after their oxygen and electrical power have been exhausted.

State Welfare Population Increases More Than 12%

HARRISBURG (AP) — While the number of welfare recipients in Pennsylvania has jumped more than 12 per cent this year, people on both sides of the relief cashier's window look on the increase as a move toward the real intent of the public assistance Law.

That intent, as declared by the state legislature in 1937 and 1943, is something akin to the "guaranteed annual income" idea being advanced by both liberals and conservatives of both major political parties.

"We have always had a 'guaranteed annual income' in Pennsylvania, but we called it 'public assistance,'" says Elias Cohen, state commissioner of family services in the Public Welfare Department.

"The state law back in 1937 said everybody was entitled to a certain amount of income," he said. But he indicated a lot of conditions were placed on the distribution of support funds which cut back on the number of actual recipients.

"You can validly say that the intent of a 'guaranteed annual income' is clearly there in the welfare code," observes John Stein, Community Legal Services Inc. lawyer assigned to the Philadelphia Welfare Rights Organization.

"But," he added, "People are just only now getting what the law provides them."

The 1937 Public Assistance Law was amended in 1943 to include this "legislative intent": "To promote the welfare and happiness of all the people of the Commonwealth, but providing assistance to all of its needy and distressed, to provide for themselves and their dependents a decent and healthful standard of living."

Between Jan. 1, when relief benefits were increased by 26 per cent, and April 15, some 57,000 persons were added to the state's welfare rolls bringing the total to 511,600.

A substantial portion of the increase is believed to be due to the fact that the increase in benefits has made thousands more eligible for at least partial state support payments.

The Pennsylvania Regional Advisory Board of the national Jewish organization presented its Torch of Liberty Award to Rep. K. Leroy Irvis of Pittsburgh, Democratic leader in the House, and Sen. Frederick H. Hobbs, a freshman Republican from Pottsville.

Dr. Norman M. Wall of Pottsville, chairman of the PDL board, praised the two lawmakers for their "devoted and distinguished effort to preserve and translate into greater effectiveness the ideals of American democracy."

In receiving the award, Irvis, highest ranking Negro in the legislature, said he was fighting discrimination in private clubs because he opposed "even nominal leaks in the dikes of freedom... and the smallest infringement of my rights."

Hobbs, who is white, responded by saying he was willing to accept "criticism, abuse and scorn" because of his "belief that discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin has no place in a free society."

Irvis and Hobbs introduced identical bills in the House and Senate in March, but neither measure has been reported from committee. Under the proposal, clubs formed by religious and ethnic groups would be exempt from anti-discrimination provisions.

Aluminum Price Hikes Termed More Symbolic Than Real

H. W. Ledebur, vice president purchasing, for Betts Machine Co., speaking at a non-ferrous metals forum in Minneapolis, Minn., said recent increases in the price of aluminum ingots are "irrelevant" and more symbolic than real.

The forum was part of the 54th annual International Purchasing Conference of the National Association of Purchasing Management.

The American Metal Market publication reporting on the conference quoted Ledebur as saying that prices during the last 15 months averaged about 23 cents per pound.

There has been a definite firming trend of prices since early January, he said. Although discounting of list prices has narrowed and major producers claim an end to discounting by mid summer, Ledebur said in his opinion discounting would escalate in the last half of the year.

Apollo 10 Astronauts Put Zing Back into Space Talk

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Not since the fledgling days of space flight when everything was "beautiful" and "fantastic" have any astronauts been as exuberant and chatty as the crew of Apollo 10.

They put zing back into talk from space. Space pizzazz. And with their generous and adroit use of television, they've added an important new dimension—space showbiz.

Compared with the men on most of the 19 previous space flights, the Apollo 10 threesome—Thomas P. Stafford, Eugene A. Cernan and John W. Young—positively bubbled. All three have been up before, but there's nothing blasé about them.

"We're right there! We're right over it!" yelled the uninhibited Cernan when he and Stafford skimmed at 50,000 feet over the spot where the next space men are to land. "I'm telling you, we are low, we're close babe. This is it."

Stafford, too, was shouting: "Oh, look at that!"

When the space program was new eight years ago, Alan B. Shepard—America's first man in space—set a descriptive trend with, "What a beautiful view!" John Glenn, the country's first man in orbit, rewrote that line to "Oh, that view is tremendous!"

Succeeding spacemen—mostly engineers and test pilots—stuck pretty much to test pilot talk: "I'm back on normal oxygen rate," "Cabin pressure at 14 psi is complete," became favorites of the one-man Mercury flights.

Some of the sparkle was reborn in the two-man flights of the Gemini program, especially during walks in space. But this, too, faded fast.

Stafford was one of the prime advocates of television from space and he used it to the fullest, at times letting the camera stay on for an hour when the schedule called for 10 minutes.

He gave his reason often: "We'd like to thank the taxpayers who made all this possible."

Cernan, a Navy Commander, loosed some sailor's language when the lunar landing craft suddenly went into wild gyrations and "son-of-a-bitch" came loud and clear over 250,000 miles of space. When he caught his breath he told the ground, in unscientific terms: "I don't know what the hell that was, babe."

Aboard Gemini 6, near Christmas 1965, Stafford passed down word to the kiddies that he had seen Santa Claus and his sleigh.

He had a similar message this time: "You've often heard the nursery rhyme about the man in the moon. We didn't see one here. There were three men around the moon and pretty soon we hope there will be two men on the moon, one circling."

And Young added: "If there were people down there, they have a lot of rocks to play with."

The three astronauts showed press agent's instincts in naming their two spacecraft after popular comic strip figures. There was something beguiling about radio calls to Snoopy and Charlie Brown.

After they blasted out of moon orbit, Stafford told his television audience: "This is absolutely incredible. I thought it was a fantastic view leaving the earth, but it is going to be even a more fantastic one leaving the moon here and heading back to the good old earth."

Cernan added the kicker: "I've always believed that nothing is impossible and now I'm convinced of it. I hope that what we're doing here, and what's going to go on in the future, is going to be something that is going to be a betterment to all mankind. I'm convinced of that."

Assembly Resumes Talk On $2.5 Billion Budget

HARRISBURG (AP) — The General Assembly returns from a two-week recess Monday to resume consideration of Gov. Shafer's $2.52 billion budget, whose financing is dependent on some one-half billion dollars in new or increased taxes.

Legislative leaders expressed hope that the state's financial dilemma could be resolved before the start of the new fiscal year July 1. But chances of an early settlement appeared to be dwindling as the deadline date drew nigh.

With Republicans proposing cuts in Shafer's budget and Democrats recommending additional spending, it seemed apparent that some sort of compromise would have to be worked out within the politically divided legislature.

Although no lawmaker stood ready to embrace the governor's income tax proposal, there were indications that an alternate revenue raising program might be forthcoming from those unwilling to scale down the Shafer budget within the framework of existing finances.

The Democratic-controlled House planned to launch an investigation into business tax exemptions in an effort to determine whether the state's giant corporations were receiving an unfair advantage over the individual taxpayer.

The probe was prompted by disclosure that U.S. Steel paid no corporate net income tax to the state for 1967 despite profits of $177 million. Shafer has maintained that the firm benefited from tax write-offs granted for plant expansion.

Regardless of the committee's findings, there appeared only two basic choices open to the legislature—either cut Shafer's budget by some one-half billion dollars or vote increased taxes on both business and the consumer.

Most observers predicted that the lawmakers would do a little of both, although there was a very real possibility that any vote on taxes might be postponed until after the November election for obvious reasons.

In the meantime, the state would be forced to operate—as it has many times in the past—on so-called "stop gap" appropriations. Shafer urged the legislature to avoid the oft-used technique this year.

There are several important bills on the calendars of both House and Senate which the lawmakers will take up when they return. The Senate convenes at 2 p.m., the House at 3 p.m.

Priest, Secretary Marry; Not Upset by Excommunication

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Rev. George J. Hafner, a 33-year-old Roman Catholic priest, and a 33-year-old secretary were married here Saturday, and they don't appear disturbed by their excommunication from the church.

"Who cares?" was Father Hafner's reaction to his excommunication. "It's one more example of the kind of narrow, threatening, unreasonable attitude of some members of the church."

Father Hafner, 42, who resigned as an assistant pastor of St. James Church in Trenton, N.J., and his bride, the former Mary Catherine Stanley of Dayton, Ohio, became close while they were members of the controversial Christian Laymen's Experimental Organization, a discussion group founded by Father Hafner in 1966. It is centered in southern New Jersey.

Miss Stanley, a secretary there, and Father Hafner were wed in the Chapel of Four Chaplains by a married Catholic priest, the Rev. Paul Mayer of Edgewater, N.J., in a two-ring ceremony. Father Hafner, with a white carnation on his black clerical suit, also wore his clerical collar to show he intends to retain his priestly functions, and also as a symbol of married Catholic clergy, whom he feels must soon be recognized.

Msgr. William Fitzgerald of the Chancery Office in Trenton said the marriage called for automatic excommunication of the couple. Father Hafner for breaking his vow of chastity and his bride for marrying an ordained priest.

"I won't let that bother me," said Mrs. Hafner in an interview. She said she was saddened that others are upset by the marriage, which she considers "a beautiful, natural thing."

Mrs. Hafner said they had no courtship because they "weren't in a position to see each other that way." She described their relationship as a "soft, growing, developing thing."

Father Hafner feels that his marriage "is going to be a very rewarding experience."

Father Mayer, 38, said the marriage "probably won't be recognized by the church," but will be by law. "In Pennsylvania, if you're an ordained minister, that's it, you can perform a marriage ceremony."

Father Mayer, ordained a Catholic priest in Paterson, N.J., in 1957, said in an interview he has not had official connections with the church since he was married last October in the garden of his charming old Colonial home in Edgewater, N.J.

"They're probably not happy about me," he said, referring to Catholic church officials.

Father Mayer came to this country as a Jewish refugee from his native Germany in 1938 and became a convert in 1947. He said he is now "involved in an experimental ministry, trying to make the Catholic ministry meaningful in the 20th Century."

Miss Stanley, wearing a traditional white gown and a floral coronet, carried a bouquet of white carnations Saturday. There was one bridesmaid, dressed in pink.

Father Hafner gently placed one arm around his bride as the congregation sang the hymn, "God Is Love."

At communion services later, the new bridegroom distributed portions of bread and the bride held a large bowl of wine. Some 130 persons attended the ceremony, and many received communion.

As the couple left, Father Hafner laughingly told rice-throwers outside: "That's a pagan custom. I repudiate it wholeheartedly."

Father Hafner has been doing graduate work in religious studies at Temple University here. He indicated the couple would make their home in suburban Clifton Heights after "four or five days in New York."

Charles Faust, 20, a former runnerup in PIAA wrestling events, is critically injured in a hospital after a three car accident on Route 22, half a mile east of here Saturday night.

State police said he was a passenger in a car driven by Harold W. Henry, 17, also of Lewistown. They said Henry's sports car swerved and hit a parked car when another auto came onto the highway from a parking lot at a diner.

Henry was treated for minor injuries. Faust is a former Chief Logan High school student.

Historic Route 6

Anyone who has traveled any great distance on the four-lane super-highways, which are presently enjoying a boom, has experienced the boredom and monotony of the miles and miles of seemingly endless concrete stretching out ahead and the sameness of the landscape as it goes sliding by. While there is no questioning the fact that these multi-lane arteries are ideal for the person who must travel against time, there is some questioning the fact that they have the greatest appeal to the unhurried driver.

For this reason, highway planners are presently attempting to develop alternate scenic routes on which the traveler will be able to soak up the scenic beauty of the countryside and be isolated from the hazards created by tractor-trailer traffic moving at high speeds while on the way to his destination.

Route 6 is being considered as such a scenic highway. And there is little doubt that this route, especially in the McKean-Warren County area, will compare favorably with any scenic highway presently available to the east-west traveler. But if we are to promote the use of this highway strictly on the basis of its scenic beauty, we are missing out on a good bet.

For there are few highways anywhere that can outclass Route 6 when it comes to historical background. Indian, colonial, lumbering, hard coal, oil, and exploration points of historical interest line its course from one boundary of the state to the other. A traveler informed of these points of interest would find his journey along Route 6 a real adventure as well as a pleasant tour.

In the Route 6 Association is in earnest about promoting travel along this scenic route, it could improve its attractiveness by supplementing the signs that have been placed by the Pennsylvania Historical Commission with a booklet giving more detailed accounts of historical happenings so marked and include many other places of equal importance which have seemingly escaped notice by the historians.

Properly prepared, this booklet could be of such interest that its cost could be offset by advertising and selling it at a reasonable price.

Mystery and Tragedy of Hanoi

The astonishing thing about the Vietnam war now is that the enemy does not accept President Nixon's peace terms. It is true that Hanoi feels it is cheated twice at the peace table -- at the end of the last World War and at Geneva in 1954 -- but Mr. Nixon has now put forward a compromise formula which not only gives Hanoi a chance to get rid of the Americans, but to take over the country by legitimate political means.

President Nixon has said he is not fighting now for a military victory, for any military ties with Vietnam in the future, or even for a democratic form of government in that peninsula. He wants "all political elements" to participate in free elections, including the Communists, and will accept "any government in South Vietnam that results from the free choice of the South Vietnamese people themselves."

Consider the position of the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong on the one hand, and of the South Vietnamese Government and the United States Government on the other if the fighting were reduced and finally stopped on this basis.

Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi would be the symbol of the national liberation, the man who expelled the French after Dien Bienphu, and fought the Americans to a compromise ceasefire. President Thieu of South Vietnam, on the other hand, would be in command of a divided government in Saigon and of powerful instruments of war, but on the point of losing the American military and political leadership and a d American troops.

More than that, if the elections in the South were to be a free and genuine expression of the will of the South Vietnamese people, which is what President Nixon says is the really important thing, they would have to be run, not by the Saigon regime, but either by some international body or by a new coalition Government in Saigon representing all the contending elements of South Vietnamese politics, including the Communists.

The Saigon Government and many of the U.S. generals in Saigon and the Pentagon are obviously troubled by the Nixon offer. They see it precisely as the thing President Nixon says he opposes, namely, as "a disguised American defeat." They are not convinced that Saigon, even if it retains American arms, will be able to dominate the military or political scene for very long. Weapons become obsolete, and once the American troops leave, who would like to suggest to President Nixon that he send them back again?

Hanoi, however, is paranoid about the white man's West. It knows colonial Europe of the past. It knows nothing about America. It cannot quite believe that the United States would take 35,000 dead and spend $30 billion a year and then agree to go away. Yet this is the fact. The President wants out. He is risking everything, including the Communist control of the whole peninsula, everything except the humiliation of the United States.

Unfortunately, Hanoi is so ill-informed about America that it seems determined on a policy of humiliation, and this is dangerous. For if Nixon rejects a strategy of military victory, and Hanoi insists on trying to win on the battlefield, this situation, in the present militant and repressive mood of Amer-

My Hero Was A Pygmy

No man ever forgives a hero who isn't. When I was a cub reporter, Ernest Hemingway was mine. He had written a book called "The Sun Also Rises." It was his first about bullfighting and about men who watch matadors die and who, in the cool of the evening, trade women.

He was the father of the lean and hungry sentence. Often, when the city editor was thinking of giving a story assignment to me, I opened the top drawer of my desk and flipped "The Sun Also Rises" to a random page and read it quickly. I thought that, by osmosis, my hero's touch would filter through my brain to my fingertips.

As the years rolled by, I read more and more of Hemingway and thought less and less of him. Either I was beginning to mature and could see the pre-eminent fear of death in the man, or he was diminishing to my size and my hero was a pygmy.

I was so surprised when he quit. He stuck two barrels of a gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger with a bare toe. He was sure he had lost his virility; he was tired of counting the hairs on his chest; his mental depression was so deep that he had lost the ability to place one word behind the other. Maybe, for a writer, this is the time to go because an author is the only craftsman who cannot employ an assistant.

Hemingway was a simple man to analyze. He was obsessed with manliness. This, to him, meant fishing for the biggest fish, shooting the most ferocious lion, and subjecting the most beautiful women to his will. It was an assortment of achievements which had to be repeated again and again.

He could not brook any criticism of his books and broke strong friendships as some men snap matches. Scribner, his publishers, catered to his whims because he was a profitable property and a fine writer. Max Perkins, his editor, was a better man than Hemingway but he will go down in literary history as the man who was smart enough to take Hemingway from another publisher and keep him happy.

There came a time when I was War Editor at Collier's Magazine and Mr. H. and his then current wife, Martha Gellhorn, were members of our staff. One of the articles Hemingway cabled was so bad, so senseless that I was half convinced that he had written it while intoxicated. There was another war article from his wife which opened by telling of nude Polish soldiers bathing in the Adriatic.

I cut them to the bone, as some editors do to my stories now. One may not agree with an editor, but a writer can never deny the man's right to cut, revise or kill. His is the final judgment.

Hemingway said nothing about what I did to his piece. Miss Gellhorn returned from Italy to call me names and ask by what right I had cut out the nude Polish soldiers. They were falling off their pedestals.

He was a squarish mustached man who enjoyed being called "Poppa" and enjoyed speaking in a spurious Indian patois:

MASON DENISON

Return To Front Lines

HARRISBURG -- Pennsylvania's legislative troops return to the wars today following their two-week primary election R&R (rest and recreation) tour in the hustings, little closer to what might be termed "victory" than they were when they started the campaign some five months ago.

Denison

In essence the campaign, or more specifically perhaps the battle for more taxpayer farthings, has bogged down into something approaching a tactical stalemate -- between His Excellency the Governor who has proposed a half-billion-dollar tax increase, and the legislative greats who become almost apoplectic at the thought of levying a half-billion-dollar additional tax load on already squawking home front taxpayers.

This was the posture of lawmakers before they deserted Capitol Hill early in the month for their two-week foray on the more peaceful home front -- and it is still the posture as they return to the front lines today for another ruddy day at trying to figure out just what they're going to do.

They have to do something; they know this as they've known it all along but the one big factor facing them now as they mill about their legislative jungle is -- time.

In another month the new fiscal year gets under way and without the budget and tax issues settled, the Keystone State moves into a vacuum.

Isn't a question of the great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania sliding into the Atlantic Ocean if the budget and tax problem isn't solved by July 1; it simply means suspended animation, marking time.

Under an unresolved fiscal deadlock, you neither move ahead nor behind; it's status quo.

Under such stimulating circumstance, what then happens? As a taxpayer, you pay no more taxes and you certainly pay no less.

As for state programs, such as welfare programs, education, etc., these too continue in simple status quo -- no more, no less.

If monies have not been appropriated for the new fiscal year, how then do functions continue? The answer is again simple: the Legislature (in its wisdom) authorizes "stop-gap appropriations" to carry on the "status quo". (When the fiscal riddle is finally resolved, these then are deducted from the overall.)

In all of this though there are a couple of jokers worth noting.

For one thing, programs mandated for expansion this year by previous legislatures can hardly be implemented -- the "additional" funds just aren't there at the moment and won't be until the expanded spending figure is finalized.

What we mean is this: Budgets are made up and programmed over a 12-month period to cover the fiscal year.

This means revenue needs (tax monies) are programmed accordingly.

Should the present status quo continue, for say three months, it would mean continuation of the existing tax schedule throughout that three-month period. But -- should the tax load be increased at the end of the three-month period, taxpayers would have to "make up" that three-month "loss" (inasmuch as tax programs cover a 12-month fiscal year), which means producing 12 months revenue in the space of nine months.

Thus while a status quo on the tax front may look good at the moment to the average taxpayer, it can be a bitter pill in the end!

"Poppa like one more big froze daquiri!" Hemingway had friends in the literary monastery--John Dos Passos, Sinclair Lewis, Scott Fitzgerald -- but if they wrote laudatory reviews about his books and he found a sentence or two that was critical, he chopped his friends to death publicly and privately.

Hemingway's father, a pious physician, committed suicide. Now, at long last, a full length biography has been written entitled "Ernest Hemingway: A Life Story" (Scribner). It was researched and written in seven years by a professor at Princeton University named Carlos Baker.

The author does not spare my one-time hero. He tells it all without reserve.

At one point, Hemingway explains to a former wife that he cannot visit his children yet because he must spend more time in Cuba to save on American income tax.

It's a jarring thing for me to lose a hero. Truly...

PEARSON & ANDERSON

Aftermaths of Dodd Censure

WASHINGTON--With the appointment of a new Chief Justice to the Supreme Court, Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut has taken heart and renewed his litigation against this column. However, the public benefits accruing from the Dodd censure continue to multiply.

Congressmen have recently filed their financial returns under the new code of ethical conduct adopted after the Dodd investigation, and they throw significant light on several previous congressional battles.

One of these was the backstage battle to limit the power of Rep. Wright Patman, elder statesman from Texas, chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, and a valiant defender of the public where high interest rates and dubious banking practices are concerned. Two years ago members of his committee ganged up on him to hamstring his investigative powers, remove his investigators and otherwise make impotent his power as a long-time bank critic.

Financial statements, which members of Patman's committee have now filed, give a significant clue to their passion for protecting the banks. Most of them held stock in either banks or building and loan associations.

Here is the roll call of Congressmen who battled backstage to clip the wings of their chairman when he wanted to be too forthright in pushing investigations of banks. All the Republicans on Patman's committee voted against him. They included:

William Brock, Tenn., who is now revealed as a stockholder in the Hamilton National Bank of Chattanooga and Knoxville; Chester Mize of Kansas, who owns stock in a bank holding company; William Stanton of Ohio, who owns stock in the Lake County (Ohio) National Bank.

In addition, the following Democrats ganged up against their fellow Democrat: Tom Gettys, S.C., trustee of an estate with stock in the Rock Hill National Bank of Rock Hill, S.C.; William Moorhead of Pennsylvania, with stock in the Mellon National Bank of Pittsburgh; Robert Stevens of Georgia with stock in the First National Bank of Athens, Ga.

Not all members of this committee voted their pocketbook interests, however. Henry Reuss of Wisconsin owns stock in a family banking company in Milwaukee; Tom Rees of California owns stock in the Community Bank of San Jose and the Westlake Savings and Loan; Richard T. Hanna, also of California, owns stock in Occidental Savings and Loan. All voted with Patman, and Rees was instrumental in working out the compromise to help the chairman. Leonor Sullivan of Missouri, who owns stock in the Liberty Loan, Mercantile Trust and Mound City Trust of St. Louis, also voted with Patman. A new banker has now been added to the Banking and Currency Committee, Republican Congressman J. Glenn Beall, Jr., of Maryland, a director of the First National Bank and Trust of Baltimore.

The manner in which bankers deliberately try to plant conflicts of interest in the Banking and Currency Committee is illustrated by a conversation reported by Rep. Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio, one of the few Spanish-American members of Congress. After he was appointed to this key banking committee, says Gonzalez, he received a visit from a San Antonio businessman banker.

"You are very popular in the part of town where we are going to have the bank," said the banker. "It would be very helpful to have you in a serious business enterprise. In fact, we would like you to be chairman of the board."

The banker reached for his brief case and started to open it.

"We have prepared some papers," he said. "We think it would be a mutually profitable arrangement. We know you don't have any side interests, and your name would be helpful to us."

"Surely," broke in Gonzalez, "you know I am a member of the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House."

The banker looked at him quite innocently and replied: "No, I didn't know that."

"You are not going to tell me you were not aware of my committee standing," demanded Gonzalez, getting hot under the collar.

Unperturbed, the man from the bank repeated his offer.

"I have these papers here," he said, "and we are going to let you have $14,000 in stock." The money, he suggested, could be paid back "in time." Gonzalez showed his visitor to the door.

Only the refusal by Gonzalez, apparently, made the incident unique. At least a dozen members of the House Banking Committee have had no compunction about accepting stock in the institutions whose profits they can affect.

While Secretary of State Bill Rogers has been visiting Saigon and Paris in quest of peace, his detractors inside the White House have been quietly knitting him. An anti-Rogers whispering campaign has been started by members of the palace guard who have been boasting that Rogers will be out before the end of the year. The word has been spread inside the Navy that the military code no longer is mandatory but is merely instructive. This is the effect of the decision not to court martial Commander Lloyd Bucher, the Pueblo skipper. In other words, the military code will no longer be binding upon naval personnel but will be merely a guideline. Howard Chernoff, whom Nixon has made Commissioner-General for the U.S. exhibit at the Japanese world's fair, has been an expert in promoting the United States image abroad for several years in the U.S. Information Agency. Chernoff is also an expert on wild animals, having been the godfather of the San Diego Zoo.

Guilt and Master-Race Relief

WASHINGTON -- We hate to hear the doorbell ring in our town nowadays because so often it is the preacher. "Shh," we whisper, and sneak to the window and peek; and if, sure enough, it is the preacher we stay very quiet until he goes away, and then we feel very bad.

It is shameful to keep the door closed against the preacher, yet so often there is no alternative. There is so little money left for the preacher's collection plate. It is shameful to have the preacher hear the collection at the front door, but what else can the poor fellow do?

Scarcely anyone goes to church anymore. Not that the town has lost its faith, mind you. Not that at all. It is simply that few can afford to go since the reparations payments have become so high.

Oh, it was splendid paying reparations at first. That was a long time ago, that Sunday when the gentleman appeared at the altar and announced that we would have to pay $500 million in reparations for past injustices committed against black Americans.

That was fine. Everyone felt guilty about black Americans in those days. Guilt was high fashion that season. We wore it to church and felt chic and smartly decked out in the latest emotion.

Five hundred million seemed a cheap price for that magnificent suit of guilt. We would have paid twice as much if it had been demanded and, in fact, we did later when, one Sunday morning, a Sioux, a Pawnee and a Choctaw appeared at the altar.

For past injustices committed against the American Indians, they said, we would be expected to pay reparations of one billion dollars. We gave lustily that morning and some members of the congregation wrote checks.

"Guilt as my forefathers were of committing injustice against black Americans," said the president of the Epworth League, "their swinishness becomes negligible when compared to their barbaric treatment of the Indians."

And we all nodded agreeably and felt warm and grateful to the Indians for giving us something fresh to feel guilty about and, simultaneously, giving us a chance to prove that we were great human beings.

Two weeks later three men named O'Malley, Mulligan and McGonigle entered during the singing of "We are going down the valley one by one," and demanded reparations for past injustices committed against Irish-Americans in the days before they obtained control of the police force and City Hall.

O'Malley, Mulligan and McGonigle were unable to agree on the size of the reparations payment. O'Malley and McGonigle wanted $1.5 billion. (They said they had heard that the Italian-Americans were going to demand $1.4 billion the following Sunday.) Mulligan wanted a mere token payment of $1. The congregation decided to split the difference and paid reparations of $750 million.

When, sure enough, the Italian-Americans appeared at the altar the following Sunday demanding reparations for past injustices committed against their people, particularly in the days when all the bootleggers on "The Untouchables" were being portrayed as Italian-Americans, the congregation agreed to pay.

It was not easy making the payment. Capitol was nearly depleted and neither the black Americans, the American Indians nor the Irish-Americans were willing to make loans from their considerable assets at less than 8 1/2 per cent interest.

The following Sunday there were so many delegations waiting on the church step to demand reparations for past injustices that the congregation had trouble getting into the church.

Many of the congregation turned around and went home that Sunday.

The following Sunday few people appeared at church. This outraged a huge mob of delegations from various groups which had come to demand reparations for past injustices committed against them.

In their anger they began demanding reparations of each other, and the police had to be summoned. The police demanded reparations for past injustices committed against policemen. A few weeks later when a group of Female-Americans appeared to demand reparations for past injustices committed against American women, no one at all appeared in church except the preacher.

Since no one goes to him anymore, he now goes to his congregation, house by house, carrying the collection plate, pressing doorbells. Few people answer, and after the poor fellow leaves they feel ashamed.

There is a movement growing, however, to restore our town's pride. It is led by a nasty little man with a gift for inflammatory speech. When the Germans were shackled with guilt and outrageous reparations after World War I, he tells us, they knew how to respond. We all know what he means.

We are discovering that guilt leads to hate. It is not entirely unsatisfying, hate, after so much guilt. But of course nothing ugly could ever happen in our town.

What Type Of Coverage For You?

"What type of life insurance protects your family against the death of the breadwinner at the lowest cost?"

"As a young law student with a wife and new baby, what type of life insurance coverage should I have?"

These questions -- typical of dozens I have received a long these lines in recent weeks -- suggest that millions of people who already own life insurance as well as millions of new buyers know next to nothing about what type is best for their own needs.

You can't even begin to get the right answers until you grasp at least these basic definitions:

(1) Term insurance is "bare bones" insurance which protects the life of the family breadwinner for a specific number of years and costs the least. The shorter the period of coverage, the lower the yearly premium. Term policies pay off only if you die during the period covered by the policy. They have little or no cash or loan value.

With "level term" insurance, the full value remains in force throughout the period of your protection -- anywhere from five to 20 or 30 years -- and you can renew this type of policy at rising premium rates. With "decreasing term" insurance, the amount of insurance declines from year to year until the policy finally expires.

(2) Whole life insurance covers you as long as you live and the premiums you pay for this coverage remain the same as long as you live. This insurance builds up a cash value, consisting of a part of your premiums plus earnings from your insurance company's investments. With "limited payment" whole life policies, you stop paying premiums after a given period (say 25 or 30 years) although you continue to be protected throughout your life. Because a limited payment policy builds cash values faster, premiums on this type of policy are considerably higher than on a straight life policy.

(3) An endowment policy matures at some point within your lifetime so you can collect its full value to do with as you wish. If you die before it matures, your family receives the full amount of insurance.

(4) The most expensive type of life insurance is a retirement income policy. You pay relatively high premiums until you retire, usually at 65, at which age you begin to receive monthly payments for the rest of your life.

Now to translate all this into "real life" for you:

Say you are like the married medical student who wrote me with two infants and practically no income outside your summer earnings. Then the most practical type of insurance for your family would be term insurance covering the few years before you start to earn a big income, at which time you might convert to whole life.

Or say you're like the man who wrote saying he couldn't save to supplement his anticipated retirement income. A more expensive retirement income or endowment policy, with limited life insurance protection in the meantime, might be your best means of forced savings.

Or if you want to be sure your children can afford college should you, the breadwinner, die in the interim, a life policy on your life would be the best bet.

Or if you're a disciplined investor capable of building a hefty nestegg and protection for your family, you might find sufficient protection in a straight life policy providing a death benefit just covering immediate cash needs and death taxes.

Or if you have no dependents and if you do have liquid assets ample to cover death expenses, small debts and probable death taxes, it's hard to justify any life insurance program at all.

REFLECTIONS

By Betty Rice

Several times while tapping out the weekly recipe column we've referred to one contributor as "Bashful Belinda." Today we are fulfilling a request for our recipe (if you could call it that) for HASH and we're doing it for "Winsome Tease." Actually our approach to hash does not delve into specific amounts. Last Monday, however, we found ourselves left with leftover steak so we made hash. First step in this monumental procedure is to haul out the food grinder, using the coarse blade. Grind the steak (or leftover roast beef) and if rare start simmering it slowly over low heat in a skillet. Moisture is provided by leftover gravy or, in the case of steak hash, by adding a can of Franco-American beef or mushroom gravy (we prefer the mushroom). Peel three good sized potatoes, grind and add to meat-also grind and add one large or two small green peppers and one medium size onion. Add salt and fresh ground pepper to taste and about one-half soup can of water. Cook gently until all ingredients are well mixed. Either put hash into baking dish (or leave right in skillet). Dot with butter and bake at 325 degrees until not too wet and not too dry and serve. Sometimes there isn't always sufficient meat leftover to feed a family of four. This may be remedied by browning ground beef to pad the dish. It's really the raw potato that makes this hash a little different. If our friend who sought this recipe is confused -- have food grinder -- will travel.

The O' Clems of Conewango Valley Country Club have the recipe for a wonderful Memorial Day dinner dance Friday, May 30 and early reservations are sought. And today we reveal who the provocative O' Clems really are -- Art and Helen O'Connor; Hal and Florette Curtis; Bill and Patty Lundahl (chairmen); John and Virginia Eberly; Ann and Fred Martin.

We also received another trick to add zest to canned soup -- 1 can tomato soup; 1 can consommé; 1 can water, 1/2 tsp. thyme. Heat and serve. We'll try this one soon.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Did you ever get a piece of meat caught between your teeth at a dinner party or restaurant and have no dental floss to remove it?

Learn to carry a thin rubber band wherever you go. Smokers could twist it around their lighter. The ladies might put one around their lipstick case. It really works in an emergency.

Leo Wong

I checked with my periodontist and he says you are right. He also states, "No matter if you use dental floss or rubber bands, do so gently. Don't cut your gums."

If you stretch the rubber band while using, it will be thinner and do a better job.

I tried it. Fantabulous! And thanks, Leo.

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Our family is grown and the children no longer live at home, so my husband and I moved to a small apartment. However, since our children come home real often on weekends, we need a large dining table.

When they are all home at the same time, my husband removes one of the sliding doors from our closet and puts it on top of our extended table so we can easily seat sixteen people.

I bought an inexpensive pad and use a pretty sheet for a tablecloth. Sometimes I even decorate the sheet with felt cutouts.

This makes a nice wide table with plenty of room for a centerpiece and all the china so necessary for a sit-down family feast.

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE: I did a very small favor for a stranger over the telephone and as she knew where I worked and was the appreciative type, she sent me a gift. With the gift there was a note attached which read, "It is for the ring in your bathtub." It's a (very handy) pink nylon net scrubber.

But what's bothering me is, how did she know??? Ellen

DEAR HELOISE:

When I need a home permanent, the only person I have to help me with rolling it is my husband.

He doesn't seem to mind the job as much if I put my hair up in brush rollers first.

In that way, when he goes to roll up each curl for the permanent, it is already separated and it makes the job go so much easier and faster for him.

Mrs. B. Bak

DEAR HELOISE:

Instead of using regular wire ties for closing plastic bags, I use pipestem cleaners. I can even cut them in half. They last a long time and do not tear the plastic.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister, who is the mother of three darling children, has been acting awfully goofy of late. Ruth talks a lot more than she used to and much of her conversation makes no sense. Her husband told me in confidence that Ruth has been going to two doctors and neither one knows about the other. I'm beginning to put the pieces together since he mentioned his concern about the number of pills she takes. I strongly suspect Ruth is getting some sort of "prescription only" drug from both doctors and that she is hopped up from too much stuff. Can this be dangerous? What should be done about it?—MRS. NO NAME

Dear Mrs.: This CAN be dangerous. Like very. Also foolish. Your sister isn't hurting the doctors but she is jeopardizing her health and maybe her life. Ruth's husband should telephone each doctor and inform him of the other. And I hope you will urge him to do so at once. It could be a matter of life and death.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last week our 3-year-old son got the mumps. The first thing the doctor asked was, "Has your husband had the mumps?" I asked Bennie and he couldn't remember so I called my mother-in-law. She said, "How am I supposed to know what happened 30 years ago? Two of my boys had mumps, but I don't know if it was Bennie and Louie or Louie and Izzy."

I called Louie. He said he had the mumps and he thought Bennie had them too, but he wasn't positive. So, the doctor gave my husband a shot. He was sick as a dog for half a day. Yesterday Izzy called to say he heard Bennie was sick from a mumps shot and asked, "Why did he take it? Bennie had the mumps when I did."

Please tell mothers everywhere that they can save their kids a lot of trouble by keeping a record of who had what. Thank you.—ZY GEZUNDT

Dear Zy: Right you are. But don't be too hard on your mother-in-law. Better for Bennie that he took a shot he didn't need than to have needed a shot he didn't take.

DEAR ANN: Does the local newspaper office open the letters to you and then send all together in a large envelope? Or do you receive the letters unopened? I guess what I really want to know is this: Do the people who work in the newspaper office, of say the Arkansas Gazette, see the Ann Landers mail before you do?—NEEDING ANONYMITY

DEAR NEEDING: All mail addressed to Ann Landers is forwarded to me unopened. It is a federal offense to intentionally open a letter addressed to another party. ++ +

Confidential to Is The Time Now?: In my opinion—no. It is a wise person who knows when to seize an opportunity. It is a wiser one still who knows when to forego an advantage.

"The Bride's Guide," Ann Landers' booklet, answers some of the most frequently asked questions about weddings. To receive your copy of this comprehensive guide, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents in coin.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

The mother of the bride chose an ensemble of pink lace and peau de sole with matching accessories and wore a corsage of white roses and carnations.

The mother of the groom was attired in a light blue, soft wool suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white roses and carnations.

Nuptial music was provided by Mr. George Hessler on the organ and chimes.

A reception was held immediately following the ceremony at the Chester River Yacht and Country Club.

The bride chose a yellow linen ensemble with bone colored accessories and a corsage of white carnations highlighted by yellow to wear on the wedding trip to Williamsburg, Virginia.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes will be residing in Adelphi, Maryland until the fall when they will depart for England where they will be residing for the next several years.

NORMAL CHOLESTEROL LEVEL

Q. My cholesterol is 210. Is this normal?

A. This question can be answered only in the following manner. For various reasons, a "normal" cholesterol level is difficult or impossible to define. Cholesterol values in presumably healthy persons vary considerably with age, sex, diet, stress and other factors. In addition, the cholesterol value goes up and down in any person from time to time. Further, the values vary considerably according to the particular laboratory test used. To define "normal" the question must be asked: "Under what circumstances?" Actually, your physician is the only one in a position to evaluate the significance of the blood cholesterol value (or any other laboratory finding).

COLOR OF MILK

Q. Why is milk white? Is it calcium that gives it this color?

A. No, the white appearance of milk is due to emulsified fat globules. The protein portion of milk alone, without fat, gives milk an opalescent bluish color.

Middle Income Taxpayer Is Big Tax Problem

WASHINGTON (AP) — When House members vote next month on extending the income surtax, will they give more weight to fighting inflation or to giving a break to middle-income taxpayers?

The argument over President Nixon's fiscal program is hardening along these lines.

Those who oppose the surtax have fresh ammunition in statistics compiled for a House appropriations subcommittee by the Internal Revenue Service. This table highlights the extent to which middle-income taxpayers — those in the $8,000-to-$20,000-a-year brackets — are carrying the tax burden.

On the basis of 1967 income, these 21.5 million taxpayers, about 30 per cent of the total, paid nearly $28.8 billion—or nearly 46 per cent of all personal income tax collections.

Both administration and legis-

Dem Leaders

Air Differences On Party Set-Up

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A task force of the commission headed by Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., has heard Democratic party leaders air their differences in seeking changes in the party's national structure.

Mayor James H. J. Tate of Philadelphia said he supported Pennsylvania's present system of picking delegates to the national convention.

"Pennsylvania delegates represent a balanced system," Tate told a meeting Saturday at St. Joseph's College.

"Some are elected during the spring primary... when issues are developing, and some are selected at large by the Democratic State Committee, in consideration of their service to the party."

Tate said he is opposed to a national primary because state primaries allow the people to know the issues better.

U.S. Congressman William Green, the Democratic city chairman, disagreed with Tate.

"I would not be at all unwilling to have virtually all the delegates to the Democratic Convention elected," he said.

"The system at present, I don't think fairly represents the party," Green said. "We do not really give fair representation to those areas where the Democratic voters are to be found."

The McGovern Commission on Party Structure and Delegate Selection was set up by the Democratic National Committee after last year's turbulent convention in Chicago.

lative leaders are showing signs of worry that middle-income voters' hopes have been raised too high by the tax-reform proposals now being prepared for action.

Neither the Nixon reform proposal nor the broader package taking shape in the House Ways and Means Committee room offers much, if anything, to the man in the middle.

Both would hit high-income taxpayers now using tax shelters and would completely or partially lift income tax from millions at the bottom of the scale.

The only way Congress could do something quickly for the tax-conscious group of voters in between would be to let the income surtax expire June 30, or to continue it at a lower rate or for a shorter time than Nixon recommends, or to confine it to corporations.

But to do this, the administration contends, would hurt the middle-income man—and everybody else—more than the surcharge. It argues such a step would feed inflation, cut the purchasing power of the dollar, and require monetary measures that would choke off credit for home buyers, small businesses and state and city governments.

Nixon has proposed continuing the surcharge at 10 per cent until Jan. 1 and at 5 per cent at least until July 1, 1970. Such an extension, with the other tax measures associated with it, would produce an estimated $6.3-billion budget surplus.

Under sharp questioning, witnesses told the House Ways and Means Committee the surtax could be ended as early as Sept. 30 and still leave the budget in balance.

There is no clear indication now how the opposing arguments will appeal to the House. But there are some straws in the wind.

Individual members have introduced a spate of tax-easing bills—not with any real hope of having them enacted, but to show where they stand. A favorite theme is increase of the $600 personal exemption.

Then there is what amounts to a petition to the Ways and Means Committee by a vocal group of Democrats. They ask that the surtax not be extended for any long period until tax reform is far enough along to provide some general tax relief.

Signers now have reached 71. A check of the roll call by which the surtax originally was passed last June 20 shows that 39 of the signers voted for it then, none 23 voted against it.

Black Manifesto Demands $500 Million from Churches

NEW YORK (AP)—James Forman says the "Black Manifesto" is "a direct attack on the U.S. government and one of its vulnerable spots," the churches and synagogues.

Forman, 40, a spokesman for black militants, issued the manifesto last month in Detroit where it was adopted at the formative meeting of the National Black Economic Conference. It demands that the nation's churches and synagogues pay $500 million in "reparations" to blacks as a partial atonement for alleged exploitation.

"The structure of the United States government as it exists," Forman said in an interview, "does not provide for a solution to the problems of black people inside this country, and there has to be a new order of government."

PSEA Will Watch Closely Fox Chapel Meeting

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Teachers in suburban Fox Chapel, fired after they boycotted classes for higher pay, will meet Monday with school officials and the session will be watched closely by the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

The statewide teachers organization has threatened to blacklist the 6,000-pupil school district if its directors do not reinstate the 240 teachers who were fired under a 1947 state law banning strikes by public employees.

"The board has authorized an immediate investigation into the situation to provide facts and evidence," a PSEA spokesman said over the weekend. "If progress is not made at the proposed Monday negotiation session, the PSEA will issue a sanction."

The meeting Monday will be the first actual bargaining session between the teachers and school directors. The teachers are demanding a minimum annual salary of $7,100, $200 more than the board has offered.

The teachers began their walk-out last Thursday. The board, citing the 1947 law, dismissed the teachers the following day.

"The law is very clear and we feel we have no choice in the matter," said William C. Scott Jr., board president.

School officials also have indicated they will follow the 1947 law if the teachers are rehired. In this case, the law provides that teachers be placed on probation for five years and be ineligible for raises for three years.

This new order, Forman said, must include a new arrangement of church and state. He singled out the Catholic Church for special criticism.

"The Catholic Church," he said, "is a very powerful government in this world. It's the second government. It's a very conservative body of individuals, exploiting people, not only in this country, but around the world."

The manifesto says the money should be thus divided: $200 million for a Southern land bank to help establish Negro cooperative farms; $130 million for a Negro university in the South; $80 million to establish publishing companies and broadcasting facilities; $30 million for a research center on Negro problems, and the rest for various job training projects and development of cooperatives in Africa.

Forman said the manifesto "turned the church's attention to the problems and needs" cited in it.

The executive council of the Protestant Episcopal Church said it "rejected the rhetoric of the manifesto," but added that the church's attention to the problems and needs" cited in it.

The United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A. voted to raise $50 million for use "in depressed areas for deprived people" and to give $100,000 to the Interreligious Foundation for Community Organization, after Forman appeared at a meeting of the body in San Antonio, Tex.

The foundation has agreed to help the National Black Economic Development Conference raise $270,000 for operating expenses through church contributions for that purpose.

Forman was executive director of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee from 1961 to 1965 and is still connected with SNCC.

Two-Alarm Fire Damages School

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A two-alarm fire in the suburban Town of Amherst early Sunday caused extensive damage to an elementary school, fire officials said.

They said the fire at Eggert Road Elementary School was apparently caused by a boiler room explosion. The two-story brick structure suffered heavy water damage and most of the walls were blackened by smoke.

No one was reported injured. School officials said classes for the school's 660 pupils would not be held Monday.

Spending Limitation Likely To Get Senate Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration has all but given up hope of preventing Congress from putting a $192.9-billion limitation on spending.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois conceded in an interview that such a limitation, attached by the House to a $3.8-billion supplemental money bill passed last week, is likely to get Senate approval.

"This limitation may be unrealistic as Budget Director Robert P. Mayo says, but it's a popular issue with the country," Dirksen said.

"It's difficult to vote against cutting spending at this time and that's how a vote against the limitation would be interpreted."

Mayo opposed the limitation in House hearings because he said it would take away the President's flexibility in spending to meet emergencies in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Dirksen said he agrees with Sen. John J. Williams, R-DeI., that the limitation is open-ended because Congress could breach the ceiling any time it chose.

Williams has promised a Senate floor fight against the limitation, contending it is only a meaningless gesture toward economy.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the limitation is not at all the kind he wants. But he said he assumes the Senate will pass it.

"What Congress is saying to the President is that you asked for this much money in your budget and we're going to give it to you," he said.

Mansfield said he will continue to work for a spending limitation in which Congress would share with the President the choice of projects to be cut, instead of directing the President to decide where savings can be made as it did last year.

"We ought to make reductions of $10 billion in appropriation requests which would be reflected in a $5 billion cut in actual spending," he said.

Mansfield favors whacking the military budget and transferring some of the defense savings to domestic programs. He has strong support for this position among Democratic liberals in the Senate.

$500,000 Fire

In Lumber Yard

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A five alarm fire raged through a lumber company yard early Sunday, destroying at least two sheds and a large amount of lumber. Firemen estimated damage at $500,000.

No one was reported injured. The fire at Frontier Lumber Co. on the city's north side, burned out of control for nearly an hour before the approximately 100 firefighters on hand were able to contain it.

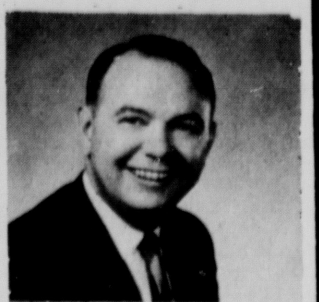

Sen. John J. Williams, R-DeI., that the limitation is open-ended because Congress could breach the ceiling any time it chose.

Williams has promised a Senate floor fight against the limitation, contending it is only a meaningless gesture toward economy.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana said the limitation is not at all the kind he wants. But he said he assumes the Senate will pass it.

"What Congress is saying to the President is that you asked for this much money in your budget and we're going to give it to you," he said.

Warren's Ed O'Neil 3rd In Javelin At State Track Meet

Denny Bonavita From The Sports Desk

Beautiful weather, a star-studded field and a well-scheduled, well-run meet all combined to make Saturday afternoon at Penn State a paradise for the fans in attendance at the PIAA Track and Field championships.

The weather--sunny and warm with a light breeze and a cloudless sky--combined with Penn State's "reslite" artificial track to produce perfect conditions, enabling the competitors to go flat-out with no worries about conditions.

And the field was fully as good as the weather. Ambridge's Ray Mushinski held most of the Warren fans spellbound in the morning javelin trials held behind the stadium stands with his left-handed tosses. He only started out with a 218-1 heave, then threw 218-4, 215-10, 207-6, 214-6 and 194-3. With the event in his pocket, he hugged down the runway for his final heave, "choosh"-ing like a locomotive, and sailed out to 230.

Warren's Ed O'Neil, who started out unimpressively at 163-7, went to 185-7, dipped to 164 then flung his 206-4 that cinched third place. He stayed around 190 for his remaining throws. Fall-down Earl Anderson of McDowell, who stops at release like he's hitting a brick wall, took second at 208-10.

The sights and sounds of the panoply were beautiful, with athletes drawing roars and gasps from the crowd all day. Some of the more memorable ones include . . . Oil City's junior Rick Weaver, fouled so badly that he dropped last by three yards at the start, putting on a tremendous spurt to win the 880 finals . . . Coaches from umpteen colleges congratulating athletes while eyeing them like a housewife on market day . . . Eisenhower's Martin Hoffner, though immersed in preparation for his own event, taking time out to watch and cheer Youngsville's Paul Yucha in the long jump . . . McDowell's Anderson asleep on the grass five hours after his javelin toss, with his spear still clutched in his hand.

Then there was Toby Shea and Chuck Mullen standing 150 feet high above the javelin area encouraging O'Neil . . . The Abington mile relay team, all colored, whooping and hollering a la a rock-and-roll quartet after their victory . . . Jack Maze of Youngsville, not competing, earnestly talking to Yucha and trying to help the youngster forget his morning miseries before the afternoon triple jump . . . coaches, not allowed in the infield, grimacing, groaning, grinning and shouting from the stands as their boys competed . . . Tom Tourtellott's wide smile after O'Neil's corker in the javelin . . . O'Neil, informed at noon that he would run the 440 due to the withdrawal of Rick Kissman, leading the pack for a 220, then finishing last, and shaking his head in wonderment as he came off the track. "What's wrong?" I asked. "Oh, boy," he muttered, shaking his head, "nobody told me that the seven lanes dropped to six at the first curve--and was I surprised!"

And Larry Steele, former sports editor here, wreathed in cigar smoke, looking tanned and healthy, and talking wrestling in May . . . Franklin scribe Jack Maze, Corry's Virgil Endsley and Warren's Gordon Mahan chatting about cameras . . . and a busful of beautiful people, students at WAHS, who made the trip down and back interesting every minute of the way.

Yancey Wins Classic In Sudden Death

ATLANTA (AP) — Bert Yancey, steady under pressure as the West Point cadet he once was, birdied the first and second holes of a sudden death playoff with Australia's Bruce Devlin and captured the Atlanta Classic Golf Tournament title Sunday.

The 30-year-old veteran, who had not won since 1967, claimed the $23,000 jackpot with a seven-foot putt on the second playoff hole.

Yancey sank a 10-footer for a birdie on the 18th to tie over the 72-hole route, and he knocked in another 10-footer on the first extra hole for a birdie, matched by Devlin with a six-footer.

Devlin dropped to second, worth $13,100 when he hit his tee shot on the par 3 second playoff hole 30 feet from the cup and missed the putt. Yancey blew a two-shot lead with bogeys on the 16th and 17th holes, but salvaged a tie with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Devlin and Yancey both shot closing 69s for tournament totals of 277. Gary Player claimed third with a 78 for 278, and was battling for the title until he slammed his tee shot into Soper Creek on the 15th hole.

Bruce Crampton, who started the day two shots in front, skidded to a 73 and finished fourth at 279, with Grier Jones, Pete Brown and George Knudson tying for fifth at 280.

Arnold Palmer closed with a 72 for a distant 287, but he still beat big Jack Nicklaus, whose finishing 72 left him at 292.

Devlin said, "I didn't lose it—Bert won it. When you make two putts like that in a playoff, you deserve to win."

Play was halted for 51 minutes by wind-whipped rain as the leaders headed into the final nine holes.

The triumph was only the fifth in Yancey's career. It boosted his money winnings this year to $50,323.

Dragons Bow 4-1 To Raiders

JAMESTOWN — Warren's Chuck Loomis allowed only four hits and one earned run to the Jamestown Red Raiders but three unearned markers spelled the Dragons' tenth defeat in thirteen starts by a 4-1 count here Saturday afternoon.

A triple and a wild pitch in the third inning gave the Raiders their only earned run of the game. Untimely errors in the final two innings provided the Jamestown squad with their margin of victory.

The Dragons picked up their only tally of the afternoon in the top of the sixth when Rob Morrison walked, stole second, and came home on a long triple by Jim Hagg.

Warren winds up the 1969 season today when they host Ft. LeBeauf at Memorial Field. The action will begin at 4 p.m.

At Stateline

Johns Wins 2nd Straight

BUSTI, N.Y. — Squirt Johns picked up his second victory in his second start of the young season here at Stateline Speedway Saturday night as he powered his 1969 Comaro to the checkered banner spot. Johns fought his way up through the pack and battled Warren's Emory Mahan until the last eight laps of the race when Mahan's machine went haywire and Johns moved out in front.

It wasn't an easy victory for the Brockway pilot as Jamestown's Lyle Brown remained hot on his tale. Brown finished second a car's length back with Jim Scott placing third.

The Sportsman feature found Youngsville's Ron Blackmer driving up through the pack for his first checkered banner of the year. Bradford's Jay Plyler and Austin Main of Blockville followed Blackmer's Number Four around the track but weren't able to catch the experienced lead foot.

The Hoolligan win went to Dick Gilbert with an unidentified car number fifty placing second. Bob Patch of Pittsfield and Keith Clark of Sugar Grove placed third and fourth respectively.

The night's action was viewed by a crowd estimated to be well over 6000. Speedway officials were forced to set up more bleachers to accommodate the over-capacity crowd.

This Saturday night's program features the Hyle-Russell Memorial Race, which will get underway at 8:30 p.m.

Opener Tonight

Tonight marks the 46th opening of the City Softball League. Always being an organization to put out the best, the local softball buffs have tabbed two of their best for the opener, at Carbone Memorial.

The Nichols Service team will do battle with Warren Beverage at 8 p.m. The Beveragemen won the league title last year in a playoff with Nichols.

John Berdine is scheduled to get the starting nod for defending champs, while southpaw Jim McMeans will work for the Tarantulas.

By DENNY BONAVITA
206 feet, four inches—scored on his fourth of eight throws—gave third place in the javelin throw to Warren's junior Ed O'Neil in Saturday's PIAA State Track Meet at University Park.

Four other entrants from Warren County—Dragon pole vaulter Jeff Hunter, Eisenhower high jumper Martin Hoffner, and Youngsville long and triple jumper Paul Yucha—did not place in their events.

District 7 of the Philadelphia area won both the Class A and B point totals, while six new Class B records and two marks in Class A were recorded.

One of these was in O'Neil's event, the javelin, where Ambridge's Ray Mushinski, already assured of a first place with an opening toss of 218-4, uncorked a blue darter that traveled 230 feet on his final effort to break the 228-7 standard of schoolmate Bob Kouvo set in 1967. Wayne McBridge of Harrisburg, John Harris set the other mark with a 9:29.2 two-mile run, 2.7 seconds faster than Mt. Lebanon's Mike Nolan in 1967.

Bristol's super-sensation Gene White scored two class B records himself with jumps of 23-9 in the long jump and 47-1 in the triple jump. He also won the high jump at 6-5.

Other Class B records included: discus, Ty Higgins, Lower Moreland, 168-9½; two-mile run, Steve Snyder, Greencastle, Atrium, 9:33.2; Mile run, Bill Showers, Milton, 4:19.6; and 220, Gary Risch, Freeport, 21.4.

Marks tied in Class A were North Penn's Bill Clugston's 21.2 220-dash, and in Class B, Gary Risch's 9.9 in the 100 and Dennis Bohlayer of Twin Valley with a 1:56.2, in the 880.

O'Neil, who finished two feet behind McDowell's Ed Anderson and five feet ahead of Jim Nauman from Hempfield, also ran in the 440 when McDowell's Rick Kissman withdrew due to a pulled muscle. Hoffner's exit from the high jump came at 6-3, when a trailing leg brushed the bar, and after a moment's wobble, it fell. Hunter cleared the starting height of 12 feet on his third try, but his pole struck the bar, knocking it loose.

The morning was not Paul Yucha's time, as the sophomore recorded four fouls in the long jump; but he recovered to go 41-10 in the afternoon triple jump, not enough to catch White's fantastic 47-1, but just missing a finals berth.

CLASS A RESULTS

Melnick Wins PIAA Golf Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
John Melnick "watched the birdie" and his eagle eye paid off in the 1969 PIAA golf championships at Penn State.

Collecting three birdies along the way, the Berwick (Dist. 4) sharp-shooter uncorked a three-under-par 69 Saturday for a three round total of 207 to win the PIAA's 35th annual tournament.

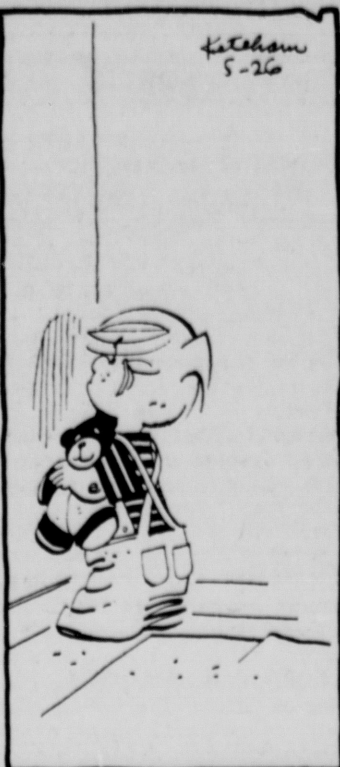

The event was among three championship events on the Penn State campus over the weekend. Top-seeded Tom Wright of State College (Dist. 6) won the 27th annual PIAA tennis tournament.

Melnick's blistering last round, on the heels of 72 and 69 Friday, was fashioned on the 6,055-yard University Golf Course. He collected a birdie at the 400-yard, par-4 ninth hole and two in a row at 17 and 18.

Ray Thompson of Marple Newtown (1) finished a stroke back with 71-71-66—208.

WARREN COMMONS

Warren Commons Apartments To Offer Open Environment

A new concept in community living is being developed at the Warren Commons in Pleasant Township, a 56-unit garden-apartment complex by Harris Homes, Inc., of Erie.

"The Warren Commons will be a 'community within a community,'" said Michael S. Harris, vice president of Harris Homes. He said the Commons, located on six acres of wooded land on Highland Drive, will combine an interior courtyard with walking trails between the three-building complex.

"We purposely established the architecture to allow 'open spacing' for a carefree living environment," said Harris. "With this method of construction," he added, "the problems of high density exposure prevalent in apartment living are eliminated." The first apartments now are ready for rental with the bulk of the units to be completed later this year.

The Commons features an exclusive component construction system by the U.S. Steel Home Division of United States Steel. The unique design of the buildings was established by Harris in cooperation with the Homes Division.

Two of the three buildings will contain 16 two-bedroom units, with the third unit housing 24 two-bedroom apartments. Each unit will have wall-to-wall carpeting, air conditioning and modern kitchen facilities. Laundry rooms are conveniently located in the lower level of each building.

The Commons, when completed later this year, will be fully landscaped with tenant and visitor parking space on the perimeter. The complex also will feature recreational facilities for the exclusive use of tenants as part of the community living concept.

Harris said the rapid construction made possible by use of U.S. Steel Homes manufactured building components assures swift completion of the project. He said the dependability and durability of steel building components such as interior and exterior partition panels, steel exterior doors, raincoats, soffit and fascia, and bifold closet doors assures superior living environment in the Harris Apartments.

Kenneth B. Chase Appointed Plant Manager by Quaker State

It has been announced by N. W. Hill, vice president-refining of Quaker State Oil Refining Corporation, that Kenneth B. Chase has been appointed acting plant manager for Quaker State's McKean Plant at Farmers Valley. The appointment is effective immediately.

Chase first became associated with Quaker State in September 1941, at its Farmers Valley Refinery as a technician in the Quality Control Laboratory. He served in the Armed Forces during World War II from January 1943 to April 1946. During this time he served in the Medical Corps in the European Theater of Operations from March 1944 to October 1945 and was discharged with the rank of first lieutenant.

He returned to Quaker State's McKean plant, where he was made supervisor of the Quality Control Laboratory in June 1954. In October 1957 he was promoted to personnel manager for the three refineries. In addition to the Farmers Valley Plant, Quaker State has refineries at Emlenton, Pennsylvania and St. Marys, West Virginia.

GPUC Reports Gains In Sales

NEW YORK CITY — General Public Utilities Corporation, parent company of Pennsylvania Electric Company and three other operating electric utilities, reported gains in energy sales and revenues for the first four months of 1969 while earnings for the period were adversely affected by increased purchase power costs.

William G. Kuhns, GPU President, reported kilowatt-hour sales by the subsidiary operating utilities for the first four months of 1969 increased to 7 billion Kwh, a gain of about 9.3 per cent over the comparable period of 1968. Revenues for this same period increased to $123.1 million, a gain of about 7.2 per cent.

Common stock earnings were $17.1 million, about $1.6 million below the same period in 1968. On a per share basis, earnings were 65 cents for the first four months of 1969 compared to 75 cents for the same period in 1968. The reduction in per share earnings reflects the issuance by GPU of 1,256,806 additional shares of common stock in August 1968.

Bob Veale of the Pittsburgh Pirates issued 94 bases on balls last season, top National League figure.

IRS to Check Business Firms

A "compliance survey" of many Western Pennsylvania business firms to determine if they are filing all required Federal tax returns will begin soon, the Internal Revenue Service said today.

District Director H. Alan Long said the survey will take about three months to complete and will be conducted by Revenue Officers. A cross section of non-farm businesses will be checked to see if all required tax returns are being filed. "Mr. Long said the current survey is not designed to determine whether returns are accurate but only whether all required returns are filed. The survey will also be used to check the completeness of the IRS Master File of business taxpayers."

Most businesses comply conscientiously with the tax laws, Mr. Long said. However, he added, these laws are complex, and some business taxpayers may not be fully aware of all the tax returns which apply to their particular business operations. These may include returns covering income, withholding, social security and a variety of miscellaneous excise taxes.

Chamber of Commerce Warns 'Wig Winners'

Women receiving offers in the mail that they have "won" a wig would do well to think twice before responding, the Warren County Chamber of Commerce said last week.

Marshall Linman, retail affairs chairman of the Chamber, said the offer may be one of a number of promotions of free wigs springing up across the country.

He said the National Better Business Bureau, with which the chamber is affiliated through membership, advises consumers that the offers frequently have strings attached.

National Better Business Bureau said the promotions operate this way:

Postcards announcing the offer may be concentrated in one area at a time. Each recipient is told her winning number shown on the card was chosen by a member of the sponsor or "club" making the offer.

In one case, the card claims a wig of "100 per cent human hair" worth $89 will be given free, except for styling, handling and postage charges, generally $2.91, $2.94 or $2.96, payable in advance. The amounts and the conditions vary from promotion to promotion, but all are based on an offer for a "free" wig.

According to complaints received by National Better Business Bureau, persons who send in the money are told that for an additional $17 they can get two $8.50 wig styles. Customers are guaranteed refund of styling fees if not satisfied. However, complaints have been forwarded to National Better Business Bureau by chambers and local Better Business Bureaus from persons who say they received no response.

In September 1967 Chase was promoted to industrial relations manager for the corporation, and has served in this capacity since that time.

Chase presently resides in Smethport.

after sending in the handling fees or got no money back under the terms of the guarantee. The conditions of a free offer as defined in National Better Business Bureau's volume on advertising practices "Do's and Don'ts" in Advertising, are as follows:

1. The item or service is available without cost or obligation, or

2. The item or service is available on payment of not more than the actual mailing costs, provided the cost is disclosed in immediate conjunction with the word "free" or

3. If another item is to be purchased to obtain the free article (1) the cost of the purchased article may not be increased, (2) its quality or quantity may not be decreased, and (3) the free item is offered for a limited time.

Because the experience of customers responding to the free wig offers indicates that it is rarely, if ever, possible to obtain a wig under these terms, say National Better Business Bureau, they do not constitute free offers as advertised.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN

(C 1949: BY THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE)

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K62 ♥75 ♦K964 ♣Q872

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass

2 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. While it is true that partner's jump rebid is not forcing, nevertheless, your response was based on sound values and did not involve any shading. The routine call of three no trump is therefore recommended.

Q. 2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠8642 ♥J83 ♦KQ987 ♣5

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Happy to have improved the contract, you should relax and feel that you have done your full duty by this hand. There is no need to call that should even tempt you.

Q. 3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A1086 ♥AJ10752 ♦6 ♣73

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

2 ♠ Pass 2 ♥ Pass

3 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Things have not progressed very smoothly. Partner presumably has five cards in each of the minors and only three spades. With four spades he would have supported that suit at once instead of returning to clubs. He, therefore, will not have enough trumps to handle your hearts. This misfit calls violently for a pass.

Q. 4—Both sides vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK643 ♥7 AJ63 ♣AK8

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Dble. 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Four clubs. In fact we would not look askance at a direct lead to game. Although partner's bid over the double does not show strength, it should be based on a long club suit which is just about all you require from him to score a game.

Q. 5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠QJ K95 ♦876 ♣AK1084

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

2 ♠ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—Happy days are here. Partner has described a holding that contains five hearts and four spades, but, what is more, by bidding his suits in this order has advertised a strong hand, containing the equivalent of at least 19 points. A bid of six hearts is therefore not out of line, but a call of five hearts would hardly place the game in jeopardy and that is the call that receives our first choice.

Q. 6—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A1093 ♥J104 ♦AQJ976

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The suggested bid is one spade. There are several choices which include rebidding diamonds and supporting hearts. The hand is too strong for a mere two diamond rebid, and not quite strong enough for a jump to three diamonds, so that the choice narrows down. While the bid of one spade is not forcing, partner will nevertheless in these circumstances exert every effort to speak again and a better idea of the contents of his hand may be obtained from his next move.

Q. 7—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K843 ♥K52 ♦AK43 ♣J6

Partner opens with one club. What is your response?

A.—Inasmuch as your hand is the equal of an opening bid it is your purpose to reach a game contract. You have the necessary values (14 points) for a two no trump response and such a call is acceptable. My own preference, however, is for a temporary bid of one diamond, to afford partner the opportunity to show a mild four card spade suit at the level of one. In that case I would support the major if the three of spades were a club the only acceptable response would be two no trump.

Q. 8—As South you hold:

♠54 ♥KJ10972 ♦AK1 ♣93

The bidding has proceeded:

East South West North

1 ♥ Pass Pass Pass

What is your opening lead?

A.—You should start drawing trumps at once to prevent declarer from using any of his little ones for ruffing. The best lead is the king of hearts. This allows for the remote chance that dummy or partner has a singleton queen. If declarer has the ace and queen, it makes no difference because he must make them both.

Your Horoscope

By Frances Drake

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars, FOR MONDAY, MAY 26, 1969

ARIES (March 21 to April 20)—The little word "too" will be a big factor in day's success—or lack of it. So—oo? In carrying out activities, avoid: Too much, too little. Don't be hasty or sensitive, either.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21)—The mediocre can never satisfy you, neither can the slipshod. So don't be false to yourself now. This day calls for your BEST, and your best will prove highly rewarding.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21)—Your innate dexterity and maneuverability in tight spots can be of great assistance now. Some unexpected situations indicated. You can meet and resolve them by planning carefully, then taking direct action.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23)—Side issues may need more consideration than you have been giving them. Adapt yourself to new trends, but where old methods and tactics still have value, don't shunt them aside.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23)—Your Mercury, favorable, indicates fine gains now—both large and small. But first moves will be important. Take good advice; use your talents well.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23)—You may tend to slow down at unexpected moments, then unaccountably accelerate your pace. Evenness is called for—AND that usual dash of humor and good will to see you over the tricky spots.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 22)—You may be tempted to dally away precious time, waste your fine assets. Don't! You are never happy when you yield to such inclinations. Day calls for your BEST!

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21)—Humor can often carry you far when the going seems rough. But a smile in the wrong place could antagonize others. Discretion!

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20)—Buckle down to duties and provide your own momentum to perk up lagging areas. It will give you a real lift.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19)—Study exact requirements and study the previous as well as the now-prescribed courses BEFORE you leap ahead—which you will indeed be expected to do.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20)—Active and passive traits may cause inner conflict now. Your attitude may be one of "yes" and "no," and even "I don't care!"—harder to fight. Fight these tendencies with all your might. Don't lie down on any job.

YOU BORN TODAY are brilliant in approach and method when doing something you enjoy and where opposition is slight. When opposed, you can handle the situation, but may tend to become aggravated beyond reason.

The Gemini loves culture, education; truly appreciates all that is beautiful in life. The artist in you evidences itself even in handling the most menial of tasks. You are magnanimous, independent and conscientious; often excel at research. Birthdate of: John Wayne, cinema actor; Peggy Lee, singer.

How to Keep Well

THE LAZY EYE

"My 5-year-old daughter has a wandering eye, and the doctor said it is amblyopic. Please tell me something about this condition. Will a patch over her good eye produce total blindness?"

Covering the good orbit will force the child to use and strengthen the lazy eye. Best results are obtained when this is done between the ages of 1 and 3. After age 6, the outcome is unsatisfactory.

Amblyopia is loss of vision in a normal eye. From birth, the victim favors one eye, and the other ultimately becomes blind from disuse. This is easy to understand when the child is cross-eyed. Subconsciously, the youngster suppresses the turned eye in order to avoid seeing double. At first, the child may be awkward and bump into things. Or, he may acquire the habit of closing the lids of the turned eye. In time, the brain rejects the image from the deviant structure. And, if this continues for three or four years, the reflex to see is lost forever.

The sequel to a constant habit of suppression is amblyopia. The eye is otherwise normal, although there is evidence that the center of frontal fixation in the retina (macula) shifts to one side or the other. The only remedy is to get the lazy eye to work before it is too late. It is for this reason that the outcome depends upon early recognition of the condition, its magnitude, and the child's age.

Covering the good eye forces the lazy eye to work. There are many types of occluders. A piece of elastoplast is an excellent occluder, because it seals the eye and prevents peeking in any direction. When glasses are worn, a shield can be attached to the inside of them via a suction cup. Frosted lenses and clip-ons are not always satisfactory, because the child peeks over, under, or around the patch. Atropine instilled into the eye dilates the pupil. The drug cannot be removed and is highly successful.

Parents should see that the good eye is completely covered. In older children activities involving eye-hand coordination are helpful. These include tracing, coloring, cutting out patterns, putting models together, and watching TV. While walking or driving, the child should read license plates, billboards, and street signs.

TOMORROW: It Takes Courage.

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

PSORIASIS AND CHOLESTEROL

A reader writes: Is there a relationship between psoriasis and a high cholesterol level in the blood?

REPLY

Many victims of psoriasis have a high blood cholesterol but there are enough with a normal or low level to rule out cholesterol as the culprit.

NEW HAT THERAPEUTIC

A reader writes: What suggestions can you offer a 53-year-old housewife to prod her forgetful, inattentive mind?

REPLY

Buy a new hat and get your hair done. These measures and a more stimulating environment have lifted the spirits of many women.

Allegheny Forest To Start Collecting Fees on May 29th

Ralph H. Freeman, supervisor, Allegheny National Forest, announced today that Forest personnel will start collecting fees at all designated Forest recreation charge areas on May 29, 1969. Local National Forest recreation sites which will be included are shown in the following table:

+ Type of user fee specified by following code: 1--overnite camping, 2--group user fee (x-2: fee dependent on size of group; $5.00 per day minimum)

++ Facility not fully completed yet--will be ready for use between May 30, 1969 and July 1, 1969.

The general entrance fee is best known as Golden Eagle Permit. Cost for the permit is $7.00 per season or $1.00 per day. The Golden Eagle Passport was put into effect back in 1965 when Land and Water Conservation Fund Act was passed by Congress. Mr. Freeman indicated this is the last year the Golden Eagle system will apply. "It is obvious some form of charging will be continued at our better recreation areas next year, but so far we have not been advised as to new procedures," said Freeman. In addition to the entrance fee some areas also have a special user fee which applies as explained in footnote of table above. The user fee for overnite family camping is $1.00 per campsite (additional fee).

Construction work is presently in progress at Beaver Meadows and Dewdrop Recreation areas. "Good progress has been made at Dewdrop this past year, and we are confident the area will be ready for full public use by July 1st. Beaver Meadows, on the other hand, is one of the major projects being done by Blue Jay Job Corp center. With contemplated closure of this Job Corp center, we may be able to provide but limited basic facilities at this area," said Freeman. Fees will not be charged at either area until major construction work is finished.

Golden Eagle Permits may be obtained Monday through Friday between 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at Forest Supervisor Office on second floor of Warren Post Office. Permits are also available from anyone of the District Ranger Offices located at Sheffield, Bradford, Ridgway, or Marienville Ranger offices.

Bill Would Raise Ceiling On Personal Property Tax

(TMO Harrisburg Bureau)

HARRISBURG--The ceiling on personal property taxable for county purposes would be raised sharply for sixth class counties such as Warren County under terms of a bill now in the Senate.

At present the tax ceiling for personal property is 20 mills. This ceiling would be upped to 30 mills, according to the bill in the Senate committee.

tives, would place the county director to veterans affairs, and any county employee exclusively subject to his supervision, under civil service provisions as to hiring, employment and discharge.

While the bill would up the maximum personal property tax permissible to 30 mills, it would not change the present 20 mill maximum Warren County commissioners are permitted to levy for an occupation tax, nor would the per capita tax on persons for county purposes be eliminated.

Also remaining would be the stipulation that no tax may be levied and collected for county purposes on offices and posts of profits, or on profession, trades and occupation at the same time during which a per capita tax is levied and collected for county purposes.

Another bill now in the Legislature affecting Warren and other sixth class counties, this one in the House of Representa-
